The Silver Mines of Nevada.

The following account of the silver mines of the new State of Nevada, reads

—the Gould and Curry mill—was built at a cost of half a million. The average yield of all the ores worked is about $50 per ton.

In the latter part of the year 1862 the silver mines at Reese river were discovered, and the Reese river mining district, in which the town of Austin is located, was formed. This district, the mining belt of which is about six miles long by three wide, contains at least 3000 claims.

The veins are small in comparison to the Comstock at Virginia, but what they lack in size is more than made up in richness. According to the returns of the asses sor for the year 1864, the average yield of all the ores worked in the district was two hundred and four dollars per ton, a two hundred and four dollars per ton, a yield which has no precedent in the mining history of the world, All we lack now for the purpose of taking out one hundred millions yearly, is the Pacific railroad. Let that be completed, and we can with ease increase the production of silver at least ten fold. Austin is on the overland mail route and telegraph line, 180 miles east from Virginia City, and 420 miles West from Salt Lake. Besides the Reese river district, there are a num-ber of mining districts extending seventy miles north and a hundred and thirty miles south from Austin, all of which contain valuable quartz veins of gold, silver and copper, and, in fact, nearly all of the different kinds of minerals known. To persons wishing to invest capital, I know of no better inducements than a ton; but which, until the railroad is completed, enabling us to reduce them for a reasonable sum, will have to lie perfectly worthless.

The State is now producing about fiftees millions yearly, and with railroad facilities I see no reason why it cannot be increased to a hundred millions. The people of our State are glad to see the energy with which the railroad is being pushed forward, both from the east and west, and hope ere long to see the great national thoroughfare completed.

Besides the mining districts above perfectly worthless. Besides the mining districts above named, there are a number about one hundred and twenty-seven miles and at Silver Peak, one hundred miles southwest. New discoveries are also be-

The Bond.

On the memorable 9th of April, 1865, the Lieutenant General commanding the armies of the United States, in response to a note from the General commanding the forces of the Confederate States, sent the forces of the Confederate States, sent this significant reply: "I will state, however, General, that I am equally anxious for peace with yourself, and the whole North entertains the same feeling; the terms upon which peace can be had are well understood."

A few hours after the reception of that note General Lee surrendered his army, and the days of the Confederate Government were numbered and they had been made known throughout the land.

The war was not ended. The Confederate cause was desperate; but it cannot last. The Republics of the South still had 150,000 men in the field, drilled disciplined, inured to hardship, devoted duced to desperation, stimulated by the memory and glory of their past achievememory and glory of their passactions ments, fighting with the energy of despair, with disfranchisement, confiscation, the prison, exile, or death, as the alternative of success, none will affirm that their annihilation could have been accomplished without a terrible cost in treasure and blood, and none but God can know that success was beyond their

Such was the situation when Grant, with the sagacity of a great statesman, with the prudence of a great general, wisely declined driving the army and the people of the South to extremity, and of-fered, in behalf of his government, as the

The White House Plundering-Card from the Late Steward.

EDITOR NATIONAL INTRILIGENCER:+ Since my return to this city my atten-tion has been called to some remarks made in the House of Representatives by Mr. Stevens, of Penneylvania, on the question of appropriations for furnishing the White House Mr. Stevens is reported to have said "that the steward was responsible, but had failed in his strongly guaranteed by Phoenix Policies." duty by allowing the spoons, linen, etc., to be taken from the house during Mrs. Lincoln's illness."

I was appointed steward soon after the death of the late President, and on the day I received the appointment I took an inventory of every article in the White House, and some months after trans-ferred the same to my successor.

I can but consider, from Mr. Stevens language, that the slur was intended for me, and take this method to contradict the assertion.

those now offered at Austin. Claims which can at present be bought for a small price, will in three or four years be worth fortunes. The cost of working the ores at present, owing to the great distance machinery has to be hauled and the high price of labor, is about forty dollars per ton. Add to this the cost of mining the ore from the veine, and it will be seen that it has to be rich to pay for working. There are thousands of tons of ore in the Reese river district, which will yield from fifty to sixty dollars a ton; but which, until the railroad is

The Jews.

An Israelite of Bavaria thus writes of he restoration of the chosen people; The regularity of the Jews is now be ginning to take place. Not only many single families immigrate to Palestine, but there has been formed a number of societies in almost every land on this continent to prepare an immigration on a large scale, provided with all possible means, money, implements and tools of every kind, to commence the cultivation of the long desolated land at once, and with the utmost vigor. There are men of considerable wealth among them, not one without some means; enough, at least, to defray the expenses of the journey, and to purchase a plot of ground. I am happy to state that I am one of the leading members of a society forming here in Bavaria, which numbers already over nine hundred heads of families, besides a number of young people who would not form an alliance with the other sex until settled in the Holy Land, upon the soil of their rightful heritage. He also adds: The Gentiles hereabouts -that is, the petty German Protestant kingdoms and principalities - are even more astir about Palestine than the Jews.

Stonewall Jackson's Daughter.

Speaking of the only living scion of the late Stonewall Jackson, a writer in the Richmond Enquirer says:

She is a bright little cherub, about three years old, with fair bair, blue eyes and a complexion of mingled lilies and roses—the lilies, however, greatly predominating, although, perhaps, she not look very robust. She wore a Maria Louise blue merino, trimmed with narrow black velvet ribbon, edged with white. Her little cloth cloak was of a light drab color, ornamented with bands of silk and fancy buttons. Her hat was of English straw, trimmed with blue vel-vet and blue and white feathers. A tippet and mulf of ermine completed the costume of the little fairy, and she looked the owner. Every effort was made at Clarksville and New Orleans to secure its release, but without success.

Acting accordingly, he knocked at the room door in which his two sisters were sleeping, and having aroused them, they responded from within without un-barring the doer, but failing to elicit any other reply than that of a rap, became frightened, arose and attempted to leave the room, but in doing so one of the sisters fell prostrate on the floor and expired in a few minutes-having, it is said, died from actual fright.

A Remarkable Bream.

A few days since a robber entered the house of Mrs. Powell in Lafayette avenue, Brooklyn, and carried off $600.
